Making Froebel stars: Tradition meets creativity
Christmas is just around the corner and with it the wonderful tradition of making Froebel stars. These stars made from paper strips are not only only a perfect way to train fine motor skills, but also a versatile decoration for the Christmas tree or as a gift ornament. Be inspired by our instructions and become part of a long-standing crafting tradition.

Why Froebel stars?
Froebel stars take their name from Friedrich Froebel, the founder of the kindergarten, and have an educational meaning. They are ideal for creatively challenging children and adults alike and for immersing them in the wonderful world of handicrafts.

Froebel stars are very easy to make. All you need is paper strips and possibly scissors and tweezers.

Depending on the level of difficulty, Froebel stars are an excellent way to get creative together and train your own patience and precision. Thanks to the prepared paper strips , crafting is child's play and twice as much fun!
